HILL, FONTAINE & CO.,

Wholesale Grocers, Cotton Factors and Agents for the Famous E. Carver Cotton-Gin.

The card of this old and popular house will be found in another portion of to-day's pa per. In Memphis business circles no firm stands higher than that of Hill, Fontaine & Co., whose members are among the most nseful and enterprising citizens of the city Having a large capital and the most ample facilities for doing a big grocery business, as well as for handling cotton, they can offer great inducements to country merchants; rockets, Esquire Glisson introduced General Gordon as one of the speakers of the evening, and all who deal with them can rely on the goods being just what they are represented. and the nominee for attorney-general on the Democratic ticket. General Gordon arose As cotton factors they stand at the head of the list, their sales this season being nearly forty thousand bales. The stock of groceries roidable engagements had been such that on hand at this time is a very large one care ully selected, and bought at the lowest figures. Hill, Fontaine & Co. are agents for Turner misrepresented him so willfully and the famous E. Carver cotton-gin, which has great Turner bulldozer, was before the audience, and hoped that there was not been before the southern farmers for the past fifty years, and is now more popular than ever before. Planters who want first-class gins will find it to their interest to buy the Carver gin, whose agents will see that every one is sent out in good shape and prepared to maintain the great reputation it has won. In a short time Hill, Fontaine & Co. will move to the large new building on Front street, near Madison, built especially for their
